BROKER CLAD IN PAJAMAS FIGHTS THIEF.

Henry Meislahn Captures Negro's Pistol After Fierce Struggle.

SITS ON BIG BURGLAR.

Broker's Dog Gets Busy and Bites Robber's Waving

When Henry Metalahn, a Wall street broker, went into the Coney Island Court to-day to appear against James Lewis, an alleged burglar whom he had, single-handed, captured and disarmed early to-day, the court attendants dropped their jaws in astonishment. For Lewis is a big, brawny negro and Meislahn is a slender man, with small bands. Yet is it of record that he whipped the negro to a standstill, took a pistol away from him and sat on him until the police came.

Mr. Meislahn has a handsome home at No. 1934 Eighty-fourth street, Bath Beach. Two years ago, when he was Living here in Manhattan, thieves rang his doorbell one night, and when nobody answered they boldly forced the front door. The family, returning later from the theatre, found pretty much bell there. No answer. Then he began averything gone from the house, except the wall paper and the dumb-waiter. The visit cost Mr. Meislahn about $5,000, and since then he hasn't looked the heart looked the door and the littriders are around the house in the house in the house in the said, feeling of his house and the littriders are around the house next the said, feeling of his house and the littriders are around the house next the said feeling of his house and the littriders are around the house next the said feeling of his house and the littriders are around the house next the said feeling of his house next the said feeling of his house and the littriders are around the house next the said feeling of his house next the said feeling house next the said feeling his hou kindly on the doorbell game.

Broker Sets a Trap.

Maybe that was why he had his susdcions aroused by something which happened Sunday night. The Bath Beach house had been dark some time ning a few yards, turned to give fight. when the bell rang. The maid answering the ring, found two men at the gate. They appeared to be astonished at her prompt appearance, and saying a boy had rung the bell and ran, the two men walked away.

The servant told her master and he decided to set a trap.

All the lights were turned out early last night and Mr. Meislahn sat down so wait for the bell ringers to come phoned the Bath Beach police station again. But they were detained sometimen rounded the corner on the jump. where, and, so wearled of waiting, the Broker Sits on Burglar's Chest.
